

TIG'S WORLD

Dorian Dutrieux Sam Wilson Kitso Sedumedi

Tig's mom is a scientist. She knows things.

An illustration of a young girl with dark skin and curly hair, wearing a blue and white striped shirt and blue overalls, sitting on a sandy ground. She is looking at a small blue toy car. To her left, the legs and feet of an adult wearing blue pants and black sneakers are visible, sitting on a wooden stool. A speech bubble above the girl contains the text: Tig's dad is a writer. He makes things up.

Tig's dad is a writer. He makes things up.

Tig has a globe.

"Mom, if the world is round, why don't the people on the bottom fall off?"

"Because gravity pulls everyone towards the middle of the Earth."

"Wherever you go, the Earth feels like it is below you. Unless you go into space. Then there's no down at all, and you float!"

"People on the other side of the Earth think that they are the right way up...

...and we are upside down! Isn't that amazing!"

"Dad, if the world is round, why don't the people on the bottom fall off?"

Tig is pretty sure someone is making things up.
